

MAHEC Ultrasound EM-FM POCUS CME Event

JOIN US SEPTEMBER 11-12, 2020

DESCRIPTION

This robust, 1 1/2-day course incorporates live models, simulations, didactic lectures, and is ideal for general internists, family practice physicians, emergency physicians, residents, fellows, and advance practice providers. Attendees will participate in hands-on sessions and lectures that will cover the basics in several areas of medical ultrasound with clinical applications in inpatient, outpatient, and emergency settings. These skills will form the foundation for basic assessment with point-of-care ultrasound as well as procedural methods such as FAST, RUSH, Cardiovascular, MSK, DVT and Renal.

Please note: This course is not a certificate course. It is an opportunity to learn and practice point-of-care ultrasound. Certification and privileges are determined by your local regulatory bodies and credentialing systems.

FACULTY

Andrew Beeghly, DO, is a board-certified Emergency Physician and Hyperbaric Physician with Mission Hospital in Asheville, NC. He has training and expertise in austere applications of ultrasound in the areas of trauma and tropical medicine. He was director of ultrasound at Blanchfield Army Community Hospital from 2012-2014 and officer in charge of forward deploying ultrasounds and training for the 5th Special Forces Group from 2013-2016. Dr. Beeghly has also applied ultrasound in remote areas of the world.

Benjamin Gilmer, MD, is on faculty at the MAHEC Family Medicine Residency Program and directs its ultrasound curriculum. He leads MAHEC's Global Health curriculum, where point-of-care ultrasound plays an important role. His areas of interest include medical education and rural/global health. He is the Family Medicine Clerkship Director for UNC–Asheville and Medical Director for UNC's Kenan Primary Care Scholars Program and MAHEC's Rural Health Fellowship. He practices full-spectrum family medicine—including obstetrics—and is passionate about advancing POCUS throughout WNC.

Jessica Knapp, DO, CAQSM, is a former coach and collegiate runner who completed her family medicine training in NC then a sports medicine fellowship at the University of Connecticut. She recently joined us as the Assistant Sports Medicine Fellowship Director after teaching at Tufts Family Medicine Residency, Tufts School of Medicine and Harvard Medical School for several years. In addition to teaching, she is involved in research focused on female athletes for which she earned the AMSSM Young investigator's Research Grant Award.

Margaret Lewis, MD, received her BS in Chemical Engineering from the University of South Carolina in 2002. She completed medical school in 2008 and Emergency Medicine residency in 2011, both at the Medical University of South Carolina. She then completed an Emergency Ultrasound Fellowship at Carolinas Medical Center in 2012 and joined CMC as ultrasound faculty. Her focuses include ultrasound in medical student education, resident education, remote education, as well as international medicine.

William McLean, MD, is a member of the MAHEC Family Medicine faculty where he practices full-scope family medicine while also serving as medical director of the Deerfield Retirement Community. He is also co-director of the MAHEC Center of Healthy Aging. He attended UNC School of Medicine and completed his residency at MAHEC. His academic interests include the use of ultrasound in older adults and in the nursing home setting.

Vivek Tayal, MD, FACEP, currently serves as the Chief of the Division of Emergency Ultrasound in the Department of EM at Carolinas Medical Center and has been active nationally in the American College of Emergency Physicians (ACEP) Emergency Ultrasound Section, Society for Academic Emergency Medicine (SAEM) Ultrasound Interest Group, and American Institute of Ultrasound in Medicine (AIUM) Emergency Ultrasound Section. His academic interests include new avenues in ultrasonography, resuscitation, health policy and computerization of Emergency Department (ED) operations.
