DESCRIPTION

Oncology care has become increasingly complex as preventive care, early detection screening approaches, and oncology treatments continue to evolve. Understanding and helping our patients navigate cancer care delivery systems is critical and requires a team-based approach. Patient navigators are increasingly recognized as an essential component of comprehensive cancer care both inside and outside of the cancer center. This year's conference will explore best practices that address transitioning patients back to their primary care provider, financial toxicity, keeping patients out of the Emergency Department, and demonstrating the success of your program.

AUDIENCE

Target audience includes physicians, pharmacists, oncology nurse navigators, administrators, care coordinators, advanced practice nurses, fellows, medical students, nursing students, patient navigators, community health workers, case managers, social workers, patient advocates, community ambassadors, lay health advisors, community educators, peer supporters, and lay volunteer patient navigators.

OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of this live, knowledge-based activity, the participant will be able to:

- Describe the team-based approach for navigating patients through the cancer care delivery system
- Recognize the role of the patient navigator both in and out of the cancer center
- List best practices for transitioning cancer patients back to primary care settings
- Review strategies to help keep patients out of the emergency room

CONFERENCE FACULTY

Jean B. Sellers, RN, MSN, is the Administrative Clinical Director at the UNC Cancer Network, Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center, in Chapel Hill, NC. She has been leading the development of patient navigation models at the statewide level for UNC since 2007. Today, she consults with cancer centers and hospitals across North Carolina to assist those institutions with integrating cancer support services within identified communities. Sellers brings nearly 25 years of experience working in a variety of leadership positions within cancer clinics, hospitals, and hospice communities. She has served on various committees within the Oncology Nursing Society to develop and support the role of the Oncology Nurse Navigator. She is currently serving as a President's Council member on the National Patient and Family Advocate Foundation. She is the co-founder and current President of the North Carolina Oncology Navigator Association. She was a member of the North Carolina Advisory Committee on Cancer Coordination and Control (Governor appointment).

Steven R. Patierno, PhD, is the Deputy Director of the Duke Cancer Institute, where he helps lead a top-ranked, NCI-designated Comprehensive Cancer Center dedicated to providing leading-edge, compassionate care from diagnosis to treatment to survivorship; advancing multi-disciplinary care and trans-disciplinary cancer research; and authentic community engagement for health education, prevention, screening and access to care. Joining the Duke University Medical Center in 2012, Dr. Patierno serves as a Professor of Medicine, Professor of Pharmacology and Cancer Biology, and Professor of Community and Family Medicine. He is the senior scientific and operational leader for cancer control and population sciences; cancer supportive care and survivorship; cancer health equity and disparities; global cancer; cancer and the environment; and cancer outcomes, economics and policy. He is nationally recognized in cancer healthcare delivery and policy, and has received numerous awards for his local, state and national leadership in health disparities.

Joanna L. Fawzy Morales, Esq, is a cancer rights attorney and CEO of the Triage Cancer—a national, nonprofit organization providing cancer survivorship education through educational events, speakers bureau, and online materials and resources. Joanna has spent more than 23 years working in the cancer community, including as an Adjunct Professor of Law at Loyola Law School, teaching a seminar in Cancer Rights, and for the John Wayne Cancer Institute's Psychosocial Care Program. Joanna has presented hundreds of seminars on employment, insurance, financial, and advocacy issues. She has been published in Psycho-Oncology, Coping with Cancer, Women, and other publications. She contributed to a book entitled, Work and Cancer Survivors. She has co-authored a book on Cancer Rights Law for the American Bar Association (TBR 2018). In 2010, she was also recognized by the Los Angeles Daily Journal as one of the Top 20 Attorneys in California Under the Age of 40.

Kevin C. Oeffinger, MD, is a family physician, the founding Director of the Duke Center for Onco-Primary Care, and the Director of the Supportive Care and Survivorship Center at Duke Cancer Institute. He is a Professor in the Department of Medicine at Duke University Medical Center. Dr. Oeffinger has a long-standing record of NIH-supported research in cancer screening and survivorship and has served in a leadership capacity in various cancer-focused and primary care-focused national committees and organizations, including the American Society of Clinical Oncology, the American Cancer Society, and the American Academy of Family Physicians.

Edward Partridge, MD, is Director Emeritus and Professor Emeritus of the UAB Comprehensive Cancer Center, Medical Director of the UABHS Cancer Community Network, and Chief Medical Officer of Guideway Care, Inc. He has a long history of translating academic research into practical, real-world applications—particularly in the areas of cancer prevention and control in minority populations. Dr. Partridge has served as PI of two SPOREs in gynecological cancer (cervix and ovarian) and as the co-director of the UAB Minority Health & Health Disparities Research Center from 2002 to 2017. He has a track record of mentorship and leadership of training programs, including the Fellowship Program in the Division of Gynecological Oncology at UAB and the Morehouse School of Medicine/Tuskegee University/UAB Comprehensive Cancer Center Partnership.

Kris Blackley, RN, MSN, BBA, OCN, has been an Oncology Nurse for almost 30 years. She has worked in a variety of patient settings—such as Inpatient, Outpatient, BMT, and Clinical Trials—before starting in her current role as the Director of Patient Navigation at the Levine Cancer Institute. In addition to developing a large, multi-center Navigation program, Kris and her navigators have developed Information Systems to assist with patient management and to collect data for navigation research. Kris' goal is to understand and meet the needs of her team so they are able to provide high quality, patient-centered care.
