DESCRIPTION
We cannot not work with families. The influence of family on who we are, what we do, and who we become is ubiquitous and inevitable. But how do we work with families effectively? What is a useful framework for family work, and what do we actually do in a family session?

Join us on October 10th for a fun, fast-paced, experiential workshop where you will learn tangible, well-tested concepts and methods for working with families. This workshop includes captivating didactic and video presentations as well as professional interaction and discussion as a way to introduce and practice family intervention skills and techniques. Participants will receive an overview of the over-arching philosophy and theory behind the systemic approach to treating families developed by Dr. John T. Edwards.

AUDIENCE
Mental health professionals including substance abuse counselors, social workers, psychologists, counselors, marriage and family therapists, school counselors, and other professionals interested in this subject.

OBJECTIVES
Upon completion of this activity, participants will be able to:

• Describe the ReSPECT Model for initial family sessions
• Explain how to engage families in therapeutic change
• Demonstrate how to use a Family Map and Systems Hypothesis to perceive and present cases
• Facilitate Family Sculpting to assess and intervene
• Discuss how to effectively move the target of intervention from a single identified patient to the family system
• Define and describe multiple-family group therapy
• Explain the philosophy and theory behind Dr. John T. Edwards’ systemic approach to treating families
