MAHEC has had an academic partnership with UNC School of Medicine for decades. In 2009, UNC SOM opened its Asheville Campus, housed at MAHEC, which provides clinical education for third- and fourth-year medical students at MAHEC, regional hospitals, and outpatient practices in Western North Carolina utilizing an innovative longitudinal curriculum. Residents are part of the education of these students as well as teach fourth year medical students from across the nation on electives and acting internships.

Located on MAHEC's main campus in Asheville, UNC Health Sciences at MAHEC includes the UNC School of Medicine Asheville Campus, a master of public health program jointly led by UNC Gillings School of Global Public Health and UNC Asheville, and innovative educational and research collaborations with UNC Eshelman School of Pharmacy and UNC Adams School of Dentistry.

UNC Health Sciences at MAHEC is supported and informed by our Department of Program Evaluation and Research and the Library Science Department which focus on rural healthcare workforce development, academic medicine, clinical research, and practice transformation to improve patient, community, and population health.
